A Special Offer To Readers of MI!

- Ever thought of building a computer or a teaching machine?
- Ever thought of listening to a message from outer space or Peking or Antarctica or the CIA?
- Ever thought of adding a transistor ignition or an emergency two-way radio to your car?
- Ever thought of installing a real hi-fi or a burglar and fire alarm system in your home?

None of these things is difficult. They're only samples of the exciting areas of hobby electronics that are covered in every issue (six each year) of MI's companion magazine, ELECTRONICS ILLUSTRATED. Even if you've never handled a soldering gun before, you'll find in EI reviews of kits that can be built even by the greenest novice—and, after a little practice, you may want to go on to build your own color TV or electronic organ or stereo receiver.

At this special rate—7 issues for $2, a price available only to readers of MI—you'll want to fill in the postage-free reply card facing this page and order your subscription now, while the offer is still in effect (or renew, if you already subscribe to EI). And if you send your payment with the order we'll throw in an extra issue free, making eight in all!
